Children Whip Movie Actor Into Condition

Because Frank Lovejoy's children like to get out and do things, their father is in the best physical shape of his life.

Frank, soon to be seen in Warner Bros.' "Starlift," has become an ice skater, roller skater and model plane enthusiast, all because Judy Lovejoy, who's 9, and Stephen, 6, are by way of being the most active youngsters in the screen colony.

"It started out with ice skating," declared Frank. "Judy wanted a pair of ice skates and I bought a pair not only for her but for Stephen. Then, of course, I had to buy a pair for myself so I could teach them.

"From ice skating they naturally progressed to roller skating, although I guess it's generally the other way around. Anyway we've been going to a rollerdrome on Saturday afternoon and an ice skating palace on Sunday afternoon. And those first few Mondays were really tough.

"Then the kids heard about model airplanes," said the actor. "So I bought them a couple, but since they're really a little young to manage the planes, I've been doing most of the flying—and chasing after the planes.

"So far I've kept up with the kids but I don't know how long it'll last. Now they're interested in mountain climbing."

Jeep Has Actress Sore From Soar

Mari Aldon, new blonde Warner Bros. actress, returned to Hollywood recently with black and blue spots in interesting places to prove that driving a jeep is not a job for ladies who bruise easily.

Miss Aldon spent five weeks at Fort Knox, Ky., playing the feminine lead opposite Steve Cochran in "The Tanks Are Coming." She enacts the role of a newspaper correspondent and has to drive a jeep in several scenes.

Cary Grants Work With Kittens And—Kerchoo!

Cary Grant and Betsy Drake don't mind in the least working with the five children who play their family in Warner Bros.' "Room For One More," even though kids are notorious scene stealers.

What's really got the Grants down is the mother cat and her six kittens, who along with the children are important to the action of the film.

Seems Miss Drake is allergic to cats. She's afraid of them and they make her sneeze as though she had hay fever.

So Grant is worried for his wife who is worried about the cats. He's even gotten to sneezing in sympathy with Betsy.

All Miss Drake hopes is that her face doesn't start to swell. That's another thing that happens to her from being too close to cats.

Cagney Persistent Amateur Farmer

It has taken him 10 years to do it, but James Cagney, star of Warner Bros.' "Come Fill The Cup," has succeeded in turning a couple of acres of decomposed granite into fairly fertile land at his Hollywood home in Coldwater Canyon.

"Ten years ago," the actor said, "I started hand-plowing the land and fertilizing it. Now I have just grown my first crop on it—radishes, onions and some fine weeds."

Cagney, an amateur farmer, has much better results on his farm in Massachusetts where he raises cows and chickens and grows crops, which make the place self sufficient.

Cary Grant Has Star Secretary

Cary Grant has a new secretary taking dictation and typing his letters between scenes on the set of Warner Bros.' "Room For One More."

Grant's "Girl Friday" is none other than Betsy Drake, his wife and co-star, who is putting to use her knowledge of shorthand and typing to help her handsome mate in an emergency.

Grant's full-time secretary is on a two-week holiday and the actor found himself bogged down with correspondence, so Miss Drake is "acting" as the temporary replacement.

Star's Pooch Pouts At Not Getting Role

Steve Cochran, on location in Utah for Warner Bros.' "The Lion And The Horse," says his dog Tschakowsky is pouting because it wasn't given the canine role in the color action drama. The part in the picture calls for a big shaggy dog and Tschakowsky is too short, explained the star.

"There's a good skunk role in the picture and if Mr. T. doesn't stop sulking I'll see that he plays it," says Steve. "He could do it if I painted a white stripe down his back."

Love's Daughter

Pleased with the work of Patricia Hawks, daughter of silent screen star Bessie Love, in "I'll See You In My Dreams," Warner Bros. has given the pretty 19-year-old dancer a second role, in the Technicolor musical "About Face." She starts rehearsing immediately with dance director LeRoy Prinz for scenes with stars Gordon MacRae and Eddie Bracken.

Set Visitor

Dr. S. S. Liu, Chinese representative on the United Nations Trusteeship Council, was an on-the-set guest of James Cagney during the filming of Warner Bros.' "Come Fill The Cup."

Cameraman Rates Eyes As Girl's Prime Asset

Phyllis Thaxter has the kind of eyes that cause a cameraman to grope feverishly for the eloquence of a poet, or press agent.

They're big, beautiful, expressive, soulful and they're something special, says Director of Cinematography Robert Burks, who trained his lenses on them hundreds of times for "Come Fill The Cup," James Cagney's starring picture for Warner Bros.

Burks doesn't even cavil at the fact that Miss Thaxter's eyes are hazel, which in photographic preference ranks a notch below brown or dark blue.

Burks, a Hollywood pioneer who has photographed many of the top-shelf stars, says an actress can have no greater asset than her eyes.

"A gal may be beautiful but if she doesn't have interesting eyes, she's a headache to a cameraman," he opines. The eyes don't have to be flower-filled saucers, but they must have depth and reflection.

He first became eye conscious some 10 years ago when he photographed Bette Davis in "The Great Lie."

"Bette's eyes convinced me how important those peepers can be," he said. "The guy who wrote that 'eyes are the window of the soul' was really in focus."
